Left side: And forgive us our trespasses

Right side: Against our sister, against our brother, against our mother, against our father, against the unborn child, against the infirmed and aged, against the poor, against the rich, against myself and against the others in sexism, racism, ageism and classism.

Left side: As we forgive those who trespass against us

Right side: Just as I have forgiven those who hurt me, held me back, headed me off, hurried my slow steps, forced me to let go of my dreams, crushed me to the dust of the earth, made me say "uncle," abandoned me as a child, mocked me for being different.
Forgive me as I have forgiven them.

Left side: And lead us not into temptation

Right side: To live in the light of the glamour of the evil one. To overpower and vanquish our enemies. To fill my appetite for the divine with the substitutes of wealth, power, food, sex, drugs and work.

Left side: But deliver us from evil
